

Gestalt Principles:

I made the layout similar on every page so that people would know what to expect and where they could go once, they got there, instead of having to guess. Now they are already familiar with the format and have an easier time navigating the website.

Error Prevention/Recovery:

In my site, there is not a huge amount that someone could press that would be wrong, and even if they did click the wrong thing, I provided a back button for those scenarios. I also made it very clear which button does what and where it will lead you.

Constraints:

In my site, I made it so there wasn't really a wrong place to go, and it isn't big enough for people to get lost in the pages. This is the constraint that keeps them on the right path while navigating the website.
